Invention is no accident

A new idea or a solution to an existing problem may well be cracked by some bright spark during that eureka moment. However, as any inventor will tell you, getting their invention to market is no mean feat.

A brilliant new idea, a problem solved maybe, however, the challenge has just begun. Many have to find resources much greater than their own in order to move their ideas forward. With all the odds stacked against them they battle on in an effort to bring about change.

Who says there s no such thing as a free lunch?

Sponsored by DTI, UK Trade & Investment London Region, The London Development Agency.

Here is a real chance for the inventor and its absolutely free. A complete innovation showcase at the most important national showcase for women innovators.

Note: Entries into the competition (only) closes 17th January.

All inventors admitted into the awards will receive stand space to show off their new inventions to the world absolutely free, not a button, and lunch, and dinner if they make the finals.

Entry into the invention exhibition is also free and will provide visitors with a gateway to exciting new business opportunities. The Patent Office, Welsh Development Agency and a number of universities will be amongst those on hand to give advice, so will all the inventors!
